PRODUCTS

pickled skin, wet blue, crust and casing
Wet blue and pickled skin of this company is derived from goat, sheep, cow and buffalo. Tanned skins are provided in all grades with best selection system in all collections including A/B/C, D and E grades and full thickness is offered to all customers. Crust production of the company is also derived from goat, sheep, cow and buffalo. Crusts are provided with all colors, thicknesses and any sq.ft according to customers inquiry.

PICKLED SKINS PRODUCTION

Pickling is carried out to reduce the pH of the pelt prior to mineral tanning and some organic tannages e.g. chrome tanning, glutaraldehyde tanning, and vegetable tanning), thereby sterilizing the skin, ending the bating action, and improving the penetration of the subsequent tanning material. The choice of the exact pickling parameters depends on the subsequent tanning step. Pickling involves treating the bated stock with a solution of sulfuric acid and common salt. The process not only serves to prepare the stock for subsequent tanning, but also if necessary in the preservation of the stock for quite long periods. The pH of the medium is kept at around 3.5. Tanning can be carried out in the pickle liquor, where both operations are undertaken at the same location.

Cow,Sheep and Goat crust

Yata Express is a comprehensive, integrated production firm and consultancy, covering the worldwide market . Our top management consists of highly experienced and qualified marketing professionals having years of specialized technical information experience in different sectors of Crust production . Crust leather is the term applied to leather, which is dried after tanning but has not yet been dyed. In the case of chrome-tanned leather, this is known as "chrome crust" and, for vegetable-tanned leather, as "vegetable crust". Usually , Crusting is when the hide is thinned, re-tanned and re-greased. Often a dye process is included in the crusting. Also, part of the crusting process involves drying and softening.
